BIALIK'S OPINION OF AMERICAN JEWS

Bialik is generally recognized as the greatest Hebrew poet of modern times. He is pre-eminently the poet of Jewish nationalism. He expresses the feelings and thoughts that still stir in the depths of the Jewish collective being. In the exercise of his genius he comes into contact with the fundamental forces that play under the surface of Jewish life. He places his sensitive finger, as it were, on the very nerve of Jewish existence. He is, therefore, particularly qualified to judge values in the Jewish world.

On the eve of his departure from America, after a sojourn of five months, he gave an interview to the press setting forth some of his opinions of the conditions of Jewish life in America.

American life, he declared, in substance, proceeds at a very fast tempo. The Americans are a youthful, vigorous people, possessed of tremendous strength, and conscious of their power. The Jews are assuming a carefree and self-satisfied mien. They are affecting the American manner of self-confidence and aggressiveness. But Bialik detects that this attitude is only a pose. The Jews have their past, and they cannot quite escape its shadow. And their future is by no means free from clouds. The American jauntiness ill-becomes the Jews with their inescapable complex of Jewishness.

The American Zionists are in Bialik's opinion still unappreciative of the true significance of their ideal. Zionism is to them a matter of charity. When proper campaigning methods are employed certain sums of money can be pressed out of them. The American Zionists do not recognize that Zionism is a salvationist movement with the power to reclaim the creative forces that are dormant in them. American Jews give as much to one domestic institution as they do to Palestine.

Leadership of American Jewry is of a low order. The leaders are fair-minded, but they are superficial. "Their ideology is extremely dangerous for the Jewish people."

The rabbinate of both types falls far short of its functions. The Orthodox rabbis are too diffident, and content themselves with a place in the background of communal activities. The other type of American rabbis has in many cases "transformed their rabbinical chair into a business."

The foregoing are a fair representation of Bialik's statements. In his interview Bialik did not elaborate on his opinions. But one basic note is descernible. American Jewish life is not yet wholesome. It has not yet rounded out. It has not acquired a definite character. And the leadership has not risen above the surroundings. It is confused and confounding.

A DIALOGUE OF DIATRIBE

The Buffalo Zionist convention animadverted upon the anti-Zionist character of some of Joint Distribution Committee's Crimean settlement propaganda.

The Joint Distribution Committee thereupon issued a statement resenting the attitude of the leaders of American Zionism. The manifesto charged American Zionists with being indifferent to the distress of Jewry in Europe, concerning themselves only with the problem of Palestine. Indeed the statement went as far as to claim that the Zionists were sabotaging the J.D.C.'s relief campaign — trying to hinder and injure the relief efforts because they were not Zionistic.

Naturally there came a rejoinder from the Zionist Organization per Mr Lipsky, denying the accusations, and pointing out the sins of the J.D.C. The Zionists, Mr. Lipsky declared, not only did not oppose Jewish relief, but actually contributed large sums to the campaign. On the other hand, the non-Zionists availed themselves of the excuse of the relief campaign to escape giving to the Palestine Appeal. The chairman of the United Jewish Relief Campaign, according to Mr. Lipsky, went out of his way, gratuitously, to conduct anti-Zionist propaganda. "He excluded all references, in the press reports issued, to the Zionists who had participated in Philadelphia. He declared that he would welcome the opposition of the Zionists, for he did not expect support from them. He wrote abusive letters to all who ventured to criticize his actions. He went into communities and deliberately stirred up non-Zionists against the Zionists." Moreover, the J.D.C. had allowed itself to be taken in by the Soviet Government in using the Crimean settlement scheme as a means to combat Zionism and Hebrew.

Next came a statement by Dr. Rosen, representative of the J.D.C. in Russia, denying the alleged interview attributed to him in the Russian Press, wherein he was represented as having said that the Crimean settlement scheme removed the need of Zionism, and that American Jews showed their preference for the relief work over Zionism by giving incomparably larger sums to the former than to the latter.

We do not know how long this dialogue will last. Mr. Lipsky is now in Europe, but the Zionists may find some other spokesman to try to put in the last word. As each side tries to develop its argument it finds increasingly more to condemn in its opponent. A feeling of self-righteousness is a dangerous thing to be afflicted with.

And the audience—the general public—will listen to this dialogue and marvel at the glibness of the respective leaders in misrepresenting the true sentiment of the bulk of their supporters. The leaders may think that the Jewish people are really divided into two distinct and demarked camps, each excluding the other. Lipsky may regard the Zionists as a separate band, easily recognizable from the rest of the people. They are Palestinians first, and when they step past the frontier of Zionism they carry with them the banner of Zionism. They eat as Zionists and give charity as Zionists. On the other hand, the J.D.C. leaders seem to imply that their following consists of a tribe known as non-Zionists. Even if their supporters give money to Zionism they still remain non-Zionists. The allegiance of the two tribes to their respective cults is inalienable and indefensible.

In maintaining this point of view the leaders, of course, fall into a grave error. Zionists, in so far as they assist other Jewish causes, are Jews like all the other supporters of these causes. When a Jew gives to a Jewish hospital or to a Y.M.H.A. or to a synagogue,

David Trietsch, noted authority on Palestine and Jewish colonization, has arrived in this country. Mr. Trietsch is the author of the "Palestine Handbook," which has been translated into several languages; "Jewish Immigration and Colonization" and the "Economic Atlas of Palestine." Some twenty years ago, if memory serves us correctly, Mr. Trietsch advocated a scheme to colonize Jews on the Sinai Peninsula, and also on the Island of Cyprus.

Madame Donalda Visits Her Parents

Madame Pauline Donalda, operatic artiste, born and educated in Montreal, returned home Saturday on board the "Melita."

Madame Donalda made her first appearance in 1904 at Nice in "Manon." At a concert given in London by Lady Londesborough in aid of St. Dunstan's work for blinded ex-soldiers, she appeared with Paderewski, Elman, the elder Coquelin, and Yvette Guilbert. Many times she sang before royalty.

Going back to her days at the Royal Victoria College where she won the Strathcona award for singing, afterwards going abroad, Madame Donalda declared: "All I learned at R.V.C. I have retained. Miss Lichenstein taught me properly. What I studied with her has been my salvation."

Speaking of Madame Sarah Fischer, also a Montrealer, Madame Donalda said that her powers compare very much with those of Mary Garden.

Madame Donalda recalled her efforts to secure a hearing from Damrosch. The girl in her 'teens, weeping with disappointment, seemed almost a myth, but Madame Donalda insisted that it had been a very real and heart-breaking disappointment, saved fortunately through the kindness of heart of an official at the Metropolitan who secured a hearing for her.

Hard work—and more hard work—is Madame Donalda's first and last word of advice to the young singer. Naturally, she must have a voice, but the aspirant to operatic honours who comes abroad with the self-assurance that her voice is enough, draws nothing but scorn from the Canadian prima donna.

Madame Donalda conducts her own studio, which is being remodelled and which will have a large auditorium to accommodate the audiences which frequent the periodic "auditions." Her staff of assistants include several celebrities in the world of music. Her class of "ensemble" is directed by a famous chef d'orchestre, solfeggio is taught by Madame Hasselmans, sister of a director of the Metropolitan Opera and whose father was considered the world's greatest harpist. Like Madame Sembrich, Madame Donalda works very hard among her pupils, her day of teaching extending from nine in the morning until seven at night, with fifteen minutes' intermission for lunch.

Two Canadians who won special recognition during the past season in Paris are Mlle. Camille Bernard, of Montreal, and Mlle. de Burnada, of Vancouver, both of whom secured the prized diploma awarded by the Union Professionelle des Maitres du Chant Francais, by unanimous decision of the jury. Fifty-two competitors were heard, eight of whom secured diplomas, among these being the only two presented by Madame Donalda.

Madame Donalda, who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Lightstone, 54 Souvenir Avenue, will remain here until the first week in August.

SCOUT NEWS

T. H. Wardelworth, district commissioner of the Boy Scout Association of Montreal, sent a letter of sympathy on the death of the late Rabbi H. J. Samuel, to the widow and daughters, on behalf of the Boy Scouts Association of Montreal and Jewish Advisory Committee of the Association.

Forty Jewish scouts who are at Camp Tamaracouta will stay until camp closes. Last week twenty of the boys heard an all-week lecture by Dr. Adams, of McGill University, on elementary geology for the prospector's badge.

Ten scouts of the 40th 1st Jewish Troop, who are at the camp, are in charge of M. Sendel, senior officer of the Jewish Scouts at camp. The remainder of the troop is in charge of Assistant Scoutmaster H. Schlider and H. Tager, who are running a week-end camp at St. Vincent de Paul, Que.

Sixty-first Aberdeen Troop, under Scoutmaster Wm. Hight, closed their activities until the fall.

About fourteen boys of the 67th Shaar Hashomayim Troop are attending Camp Tamaracouta.

Ninety-eighth Mount Royal Troop has closed meetings and parades until school opens. Although organized only a year ago, it has an attendance of about thirty-five, most of them second-class scouts. Officers: J. H. Bernbourn and A. Weinstein.

Fifteen scouts of the 62nd Troops Y.M.H.A., the largest of the six Jewish troops in Montreal, left for Tamaracouta in charge of Ch. Lecker, a former scout of the 40th Troop (1922). The rest of the 62nd Troop meet at the "Y" all summer.

Seventy-fifth Temple Emanu-El Troop is closed for the summer and will re-open in the fall under Scoutmaster R. Ginsberg. With about thirty other scouts from the 40th and 67th Troops, this troop stood guard over their late leader, Rabbi H. J. Samuel, and formed a two-column line in front of the hearse leading the funeral.

Colonel Alfred Aloe, recently in command of the Thirty-fifth Regiment of United States Infantry, has passed away. Colonel Aloe was a veteran of the Spanish-American War and World War, in both of which he received numerous citations for bravery. He was 51 when death overtook him.

Apparently oblivious to the irony of such an act the American rabbis, in their recent convention, adopted a code of ethics governing the relationship between rabbi and rabbi and between rabbi and congregation. A copy of this amazing document has been received in the office of the REVIEW and since it deserves the widest publicity and at least a chapter in any history of American Jewry, the provisions of the code are given herein:

A rabbi should not enter into competition with other rabbis for a vacant pulpit and should refuse to negotiate for a pulpit until the congregation has disposed of the candidacy of the rabbi invited before him. Under no circumstances should a rabbi allow himself to be reconsidered by a congregation after they have once reached a decision about him and other rabbis have been negotiated with. No rabbi should apply for a pulpit or negotiate with a congregation without communicating with the incumbent. No rabbi should criticize a colleague by name from his pulpit. No rabbi should officiate within another congregation without the consent of the rabbi thereof except when that rabbi is absent from the city.

The code goes on to say that no congregation should engage a rabbi on the trial sermon plan only but should appoint a committee to visit a rabbi in his home city or seek to know his character and ability by correspondence. If the rabbi is not re-elected he should be given a reasonable time notice. No matter what the inducement to leave, the rabbi should fulfill his agreement with the congregation unless the condition is unbearable; or break it by mutual agreement. The rabbi should give the congregation sufficient time notice and should assist the congregation to secure a worthy successor. The congregation should not stand in the way of the advancement of the rabbi. The rabbi should not consummate arrangements to accept a new pulpit without informing the board of his congregation. When there is an attempt by the congregation summarily to dismiss its rabbi the arbitration committee of the Central Conference can be invoked immediately, the congregation having the same privilege.

The above is taken verbatim, for the most part, from what should be a famous code. It has nothing to do with the relationship between bricklayers and their employers or between housemaids and their mistresses; it concerns the church-going Reform Jews of America and their spiritual leaders, so-called. Most of its provisions are based simply on common decency and yet there seems to be so little of that in this weary world that rabbis in solemn conclave assembled must write it all down in a code of ethics. Those present were teachers of ethics, repositories of spirituality, men with a calling, something more than a profession and hardly a business. And yet the last item in the code of ethics governing their behaviour reads: "No rabbi should exploit the call of one or more congregations by capitalizing such a call for an increase in salary."

Can you beat it?

From the Israelite Press of Winnipeg, H. E. Wilder, owner and publisher:

"The bedroom sheet parading under the name of 'Jewish Review,' which the Toronto Jews tolerate for the sake of some of their *woman-folk who crave to see their name in print, brazenly assumes the role of censor and in one of its last issues indulges in some *sarcasms at our expense.

"This is the second or third time that 'The Bedroom Sheet' directs its fumes Westward and—significantly—the malodorous vaporings, though months apart, appear in each case, immediately following a visit of their agent through the West, and his unsuccessful attempts to inflict the sheet on our people here. That the *presumptious editor of 'The Jewish Review' should find relief from disappointment by an attack on us, is perhaps understandable; but to pose as an arbiter or critic of Anglo-Jewish publications indicates not even a sense of the ridiculous.

"Let us hasten to admit, however, that if we were in search of an instructor to teach us how best to obtain the most out of advertising, we should most likely engage the services of the manager of the 'Jewish Review.' For, after all, what can one possibly learn from 'f.f.c.' who was reared in the frigid atmosphere of the most self-destructive brand of Reform Judaism in America?

"It is in keeping with just that brand of Judaism to hide bareness of contents under a pretentious cloak, which is the reason why the editor of the 'Jewish Review' prevailed upon the only two Reform rabbis we boast of in Canada to provide a cover for the utterly barren sheet.

"Or perhaps we go a bit too far in assuming that even this brand of Reform Judaism affects a decorous exterior for purely material purposes. Where then did the 'Bedroom Sheet' get its idea for this most deceitful of all cunning devices for goading the people? Where, indeed, if not from those perennial circus side-shows that set up in front of their tent a glaringly lighted platform, upon which two smartly dressed, highly groomed performers, the only ones they possess, do a few stunts, thereby tempting the unsuspecting passer-by to buy a ticket to go in, only to find, inside, a *nauseating exhibition of frivolous nonsense.

"Nevertheless, 'f.f.c.' has the impudence to say that 'out in the undeveloped west there seems to be more of the wide open white spaces to fill in the papers' more than where, 'f.f.c.'? Our Jewish section is confined (unfortunately) to barely 3-4 columns of an ordinary newspaper page, and these are mainly taken up with a summary of the most important news items of the week, of general Jewish interest, and our own brief comment thereon; whereas the Toronto 'Jewish Review' fills as much as twenty-four whole pages with nothing but a sickening, endless catalogue of names. Evidently it is not merely a beam 'f.f.c.' has in the eye, but a whole crumbling rotting house, cellar and all."

New words.*

The Wondering Jew

"Wonder on till truth make all things clear."—SHAKESPEARE.

BEN GALUTH, the Wondering Jew, with charity towards all and malice towards none, makes his initial bow in this issue to the estimable people in the broad Dominion who will give his unpopular views a hearing. He does not believe too strenuously in special pleading; he has no axe to grind; he is not in that business. Nevertheless, if he happened to be in it he would have a whole plant of grindstones working day and night, double shifts. For in this cherished Canadian Jewish community were there more grinding done, not only would more scalps be in deserved peril and not only more axes but also more wits would be sharper. From his light travesties and gentle scurrilities there can be no deliverance. You must call him a jolly good egg. For, on the other hand, what is a bad egg but one that has lost the spirit of youth? You remember Don Quixote who, wondering what animal the artist was painting, received to his query the following reply: "That is as it may turn out." So with this column.

It may be of some interest to find out the necessary characteristics for Jewish leadership. Unlike what Shakespeare called the quality of mercy, the quality of Jewish leadership is strained. It is too precious to drop like the gentle rain from Heaven upon the place beneath. It must not only possess all that leadership connotes in the non-Jewish world; it must have much more. It must be blessed by an understanding of the essentials of Jewish tradition; it must be sympathetic with Jewish aspirations, sorrows and suffering. Nothing Jewish is alien to it. If the so-called Jewish leader is not a democrat, if he does not gain recognition from the masses, who are astonishingly neglected in this respect, he is no leader. He may be a prominent man, he may be an organizer, an executive, a worker for a specific cause or two, but that is all. He may be an intermediary bringing Jew and Gentile into closer "fellowship"; non-Jews may therefore constitute him the Jewish leader, but it will be a sorry day in Jewish life when a mere shtadlan occupies such an important position. No; a Jewish leader is a man who leads the Jewish people; he lends direction; he gives guidance from within the fold. Until Canadian Jewry grasps this and until there is much-needed clarification in the usage of terms it must aimlessly drift, unity a chimera.

Clearly in Canada there are no Jewish leaders. In the imperial republic to the south, which is by no means Utopia, conditions are comparatively much better. However diffident we may be to the theology of a Stephen Wise, the tactics of a Louis Lipsky or the petulant lack of tactics on the part of a Louis Marshall, these men undoubtedly carry the prestige of real leadership. In Canada, even on a smaller scale, there are no such leaders. The Zionists in this country, befuddled as usual, fool themselves into believing that the wealth of plutocrats devoted to lavish entertainments on their behalf in fashionable hostelries maintains the dignity of the movement. To centre around oneself or around one's organization or synagogue social climbers, engaged in a social whirl however charming, is not to have the attributes of a leader. This condition is likewise found among the assimilationists and the reformers. With them more than with any other group leadership is in inverse proportion to your generosity and knowledge of the main currents of Judaism. The more you have, the less you give; the greater your ignorance of the Jewish heritage, the finer, the more appropriate a leader are you for them. The communal life of the orthodox and traditional Jews, which could be one of great beauty considering the nature of their inheritance, is ever weaker than that of any other group. (Exceptions there naturally are and in particular the few who are now showing rare foresight in their work for Jewish education must be mentioned.) Yet the so-called leaders have a few things in common: their insufferable pomposity, their complete imperviousness to ideas, new or old. Inadequate as the present generation of leaders is, on the whole, the younger generation, through the wilful neglect of their elders, will be even more so. I suppose every Jewish community has the younger generation it deserves.

Let me end my Jeremiad in a less sad frame of mind. We have in Canada the precedent of a mildly successful Canadian Jewish Congress. When it was convened enthusiasms were aroused, issues were heatedly debated, a point of view meant something. Leadership, in a kind of way, also meant something. Perhaps if a movement could be started to call together another democratic Canadian Jewish Congress, to make it a permanent institution meeting at stated intervals, representative of Jewish public opinion, it would prove a splendid stimulus for the advancement of Canadian Jewish life. Is it too much to hope that out of a nation-wide discussion of major issues—such as the state of Jewish education and culture in this country, a more intelligent attitude towards Zionism, healthy stabilization of philanthropic and European relief endeavour—a new leadership may emerge?

In my queer manner I cling to a stranger and more wayward faith. It is briefly this: I should like to have in each community some eager, impressionable youth about the age of sixteen consecrate his life, under the counsel of a devoted teacher, to Jewish leadership. Let each one now start preparing himself for a genuinely noble career. Such young men will mean more than dozens of congresses. Conventions and congresses, in their own way, achieve very little. Anything will be a decided improvement on the present stagnation.

BEN GALUTH.

Gustave Lindenthal, American Jewish engineer, was signally honoured recently when the Golden Insignia of Honour of the Austrian Republic was conferred upon him by Michael Hainisch, President of Austria. Mr. Lindenthal was born in Austria seventy-six years ago and went to America in 1874 as engineer of the Philadelphai Centennial Exposition, remaining here ever since. Jewish Life in Galicia

By H. LAGBY

The position in Poland is growing steadily worse. The Jews are the first to suffer as a result, and the Jews would therefore do their level best to improve conditions, for maybe with the general improvement would come also an improvement in the condition of the Jews. The Jews entered into the Polish-Jewish agreement, they gave way on many matters, put a blind eye to lots of things, accepted the word, not only of Count Skrzynski, but even of the two brothers Grabski—in brief, they did whatever they could in order to help on the improvement of the country, in the hope that they too would get a chance to breathe a little more easily. But their hopes seem to have been all in vain. Poland, it is now seen, will in the end survive the present crisis and become again financially and economically stable. But the position of the Jews will continue as disastrous as it is now. At last the Jews have realized this fact and it was the "Agreement" which opened their eyes to it.

People imagined that it all depended on the political position of the country. The ruling classes, it was thought, did not grasp the fact that the persecutions against the Jews were injurious to the interests of the country as a whole, and that as soon as they realized that this was the case, everything would change for the better and the position of the Jews would be safe. The "Agreement," however, has shown that the rulers have come to realize the position and yet the Jews are no better off than they were, and worst of all there seems to be no hope of any improvement even coming about.

The old saying has come true again: "If I am not for myself, who will be?" If the Jews of Poland do not help themselves they will soon find themselves condemned to starvation.

The fate of a fourth part of all Polish jewry is at stake, the fate of a million souls. It is a population abounding in great merchants and factory owners, great scholars and scientists. For help is needed not only for the poor but also for those who still have some money left but whose livelihood has gone and whose whole economic future is menaced.

Every section of the Jewish population in Poland is in danger of losing its livelihood—business men and factory owners and the members of the liberal professions.

In order to be able to find a solution for the economic crisis under which the Jews of Poland in general and of Galicia in particular are living, it is necessary first to consider the causes which have brought about the present-day catastrophe.

I shall attempt in this article to reveal the causes of the crisis in Eastern Galicia. I am dealing with Eastern Galicia because every district in Poland has its own history and it is this history which determines the present-day relations between the local Jews and non-Jews and the history of Eastern Galicia is for many reasons different from that of any of the other parts of Poland.

Eastern Galicia before the war belonged to Austria. The population consisted chiefly of Ukrainians, who were called "Ruthenians," Poles and Jews who constituted 13 per cent. of the population. All the peoples who formed part of the former Austrian Empire were animated by the desire to separate, to become independent. Vienna was continually fighting against the propagation of separatist ideas. But in the case of the Jews the Austrian Government had no need to fear. The Jews were everywhere in a minority and separatism has stood no chance among them. They were always on the side of the Government; they all knew German, they read the Vienna papers—in short, they were the only true Austrians in the whole of Galicia. For even the few German colonists in the province had assimilated with the Poles, if they were Catholics, or had re-emigrated to Germany if they were Protestants. "Austrians" they refused to be. The Poles and the Ukrainians, of course, thought only of gaining their independence. The Government in Vienna knew that and it therefore supported the Jews, attended to their welfare so that they should have cause to stay in Galicia.

Galicia was, therefore, full of Jewish small towns where the Jews lived in peace and prosperity. There was plenty of money about. All the Governmental offices employed Jewish officials—the post office, the railways, the law courts, the labour exchanges, and even the army. Practically all the lawyers and doctors were Jews. Jews were contractors to the army and the railways. In Russia the Jews had to employ a non-Jew as a figure-head if they wanted to get a government contract, so that the contract should be nominally held by the non-Jew. In Eastern Galicia things were just the reverse. If a non-Jew there wanted to be in business he had to secure a Jewish partner, for otherwise he could not get his credit. The Jews took a prominent part even in agriculture. There were many Jewish land-owners and very many of the farmers on the non-Jewish estates were Jews. The Poles did not like this state of affairs but they were unable to prevent it. The Government in Vienna exercised firm control. All the Jews were left in peace. If any of the local aristocrats acted unfairly towards the Jews—it was reported immediately to Vienna and justice was done. One thing, however, there was which Vienna obstinately refused to do for the Jews: it refused to recognize them as a nationality. The Austrian Empire had a surfeit of nationalities; it wanted to have a few "Austrians" as well, and "Austrians" the Jews were—heart and soul! . . .

After the war everything was changed. Poland had no need of "Austrians." In Eastern Galicia where Poland is compelled to wage an iron-handed policy against the Ukrainians the government wants to have as many Poles as possible, full-blooded Poles, on whom it could depend in case of war, by no means a remote possibility in these parts. The villages are mostly Ukrainian, and the new agrarian reform law is largely intended to enable it to settle as many Poles as possible on the confiscated estates.

But the settlement of people on the land costs money and a great deal of money at that. And money is very scarce in Poland just now. So the Government is trying to create a Polish majority in the towns. The Jewish civil servants, doctors, lawyers, businessmen and artisans are to be replaced by Poles. The whole policy of the Polish Government during the past three or four years has been aimed at one single object—the systematic replacement of the Jews in the towns by Poles. There are plenty of applicants for the jobs. From Soviet Russia have come thousands of Polish ex-land-owners, officials, army officers and the like.

The elimination of the Jews started on the railways. As soon as Poland took over Galicia from the Ukraine it "militarized" the railways for "strategic" reasons. All positions were filled by the military—that is to say, by Poles, for before the League of Nations issued its decision conceding Galicia to Poland, neither Ukrainians nor Jews in Galicia were allowed to enter the army. And later on when the army was opened to the Jews, the railways were demilitarized, and the jobs were kept by the Poles. The result was that Jews who had been employed on the railways for fifteen and twenty years were thrown out of employment—and of course they got no pension. . . .

In other institutions it was not quite so easy to get rid of the Jews. Various methods were tried. The Jewish officials were transferred from town to town. The inability to take their families with them on their unwilling touring expeditions, the housing shortage which made it impossible for them to set up house in the places to which they had been shifted, the general offensive conducted against them, all helped to decide Jewish official after Jewish official to throw up his job in despair or in disgust—exactly what it had been hoped they would do. And every Jew who was got rid of in this or any other way, was a Jew the less in public employment. For no Jew was given any sort of a job by the government.

With the Civil Service cleared of its Jews the Government next turned its attention to the business world. Poles were given all sorts of concessions, credit aids, etc. New banks were established specially for the purpose of advancing the credit loans for which big sums were granted them by the State banks. It is true that all this cost the State millions, and resulted in upsetting the Polish exchange ,and precipitating a finacial crisis, but it achieved its end—things became impossible for the Jews.

More difficult still is the position of the Jewish lawyer and the Jewish doctor. In addition there is the numerus clausus at the schools which will see to it that there should be no new Jewish lawyers or doctors coming from the Universisites to compete with the Poles. It is not so much the Jews as the Ukrainians that the Government has in mind in carrying out this policy. The Government is concerned to fortify its position in case there is war, and the Jews, like any other peaceful section of the population, have to suffer. The proof of this contention that the Government is not acting against the Jews as Jews is afforded by the fact that the Government has acceded to all the Jewish national demands, in regard to Jewish language, organization of Jewish communities and everything else that Austria so obstinately refused to grant. But whatever the Government may think of the Jews, whatever Count Skrzynski may promise, the numerus clausus remains, the Jews get no credit facilities, no trading concessions, and the load of taxation is not lifted a fraction of an inch.

Is it any consolation to the starving Jews to know that the Government is not aiming at them, that it is only aiming at the Ukrainians, and that they are being deprived of their livelihood not because the government is engaged in hostilities against them, but only because it wants to get them as non-combatants out of the firing line so that it should be able to draft in Polish fighters in the war against the Ukrainians? Does it matter much why you are being slaughtered? Or can the Jew ever aspire to making peace between the Poles and the Ukrainians?—The Sentinel.

Despite the "kraut" in his surname, Mr. Schildkraut does not trace his ancestry to those who fought under Hermann der Cherusker (alias Arminius) at the Battle of Teutoburg Forest. In other words, he is no more a German than the Mischas, Jaschas, Toschas, etc., are Russians.

Talmud Torah to Launch Membership Campaign

The board of trustees of the Toronto Talmud Torah, 9 Brunswick Avenue, at a meeting held last week, voted unanimously to launch a campaign for members immediately after Rosh Hashonah. The board has decided that it is necessary to have a membership of not less than 1,200 members with an annual subscription of at least $25,000. Now 800 members are paying to the Talmud Torah about $14,000.

The Talmud Torah was built at an expense of $213,000 for land, building and equipment. Every teacher is a specialist in his work and the method of teaching is on the most modern plan. Among 700 children enrolled in its twenty-two classes over 250 children are free pupils.

The budget of the Talmud Torah calls for an expenditure of over $43,000 yearly. This includes salaries of teachers and staff, maintenance of the building, office expenses, interest and principal on mortgage and loan. Fees, donations, rentals and other receipts are not expected to be in excess of $18,000, leaving a balance of $25,000 to be met from membership subscriptions.

Joseph A. Woolf, executive director of the Federation of the Jewish Philanthropies, who gave a brief outline as to the detailed work necessary for the conduct of the campaign, was unanimously elected honourary secretary of the campaign. Chas. I. Benjamin, executive secretary of the Talmud Torah, will be campaign director.

The following committee was appointed to make preliminary arrangements: M. Gelber, Elias Pullan, Henry Greisman, Joseph Kronick, Nathan Smith, I. Brodey, L. I. Pullan, J. I. Oelbaum, with Mr. Woolf and Mr. Benjamin members ex officio.

PERMANENT WAVING

By the Father of Permanent Waving in Canada

A Boon to the Active Modern Woman—

It takes time to be an expert in permanent waving and to know the different textures of hair and how to treat them accordingly.

Each lady has only one head of hair. Is it not wise to trust your hair to a man who has given his life to the study of this business rather than to experts who spring up over night?

The Pember record of sixteen years without even damaging the hair to the smallest extent is one that you should consider. Would you rather trust to the knowledge of an expert who has been thirty-nine years in the hair business and sixteen years in permanent waving or the knowledge of a person with a few months' experience? Consider these facts and consult W. T. Pember, Canada's hair specialist, on permanent waving.

INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS FOR EMIGRATION

Delegates from twenty-three countries, representing labour organizations and Socialistic groups, gathered in London last week to consider the problem of emigration. The Congress was called at the initiative of the Amsterdam Labour International, and while the problems discussed covered the whole range of transmigration, especially as it affects the labour situation, the Jewish phase of the question received most prominent attention. Mr Lucien Wolf attended the Congress as a guest and there were also representatives of the Zionist Organization present.

Several speakers took the labour unions in various lands, especially in America, to task for favouring restriction of immigration. It was pointed out that Jews are most likely to support the labour movement and Palestine was pointed to as a proof of the Jewish genius for organization. The Australian delegate insisted that Australia will not relax its immigration restriction laws, because most of the immigrants there settle in the large towns and become petty traders. He said that emigration was not a solution to economic pressure. It should be the duty of the labour unions to see that conditions are improved in the lands in which they operate so that there shall be no need for emigration.

A series of resolutions was adopted by the Congress tending toward making the lot of the intending emigrant easier, as the granting of visas by international bodies, the abolition of fees for passports and other such propositions which would make emigration easier.

The Jewish Colonization Association has recently issued a communication in relation to Jewish immigration into France. It appears that in consequence of the assassination of Petlura by Schwarzbard, the French police have become much more careful about immigrants that enter the land. The Committee for the Protection of Jewish Immigrants in Paris is therefore warning all Jewish immigrants who wish to settle in France not to come with a transit visa, which is easily obtainable but which does not allow the holder to stay in France any longer than indicated in the visa. The only visa which allows an immigrant to remain in France is the one which has the words "valid for entrance into France." French consulates abroad do not give such visas except to immigrants who can show a work contract, endorsed by the French Ministry of Labour. Women and children rejoin the head of the family equally to provide themselves with a regular visa, and the same applies also to students. The French authorities are extremely severe at present in the administration of the law and strong measures are taken against those who do not conform to the rules. Foreigners who arrive in France with a transit visa and attempt to remain in the country are taken back to the frontier by the police.

A number of Russian Jewish refugees in Germany sent a delegation to Geneva to present their plight before the International Labour Office of the League of Nations. It is reported that Mr. Albert Thomas, the Director of the Office, was very favourably impressed with the delegation and with the memorandum presented and he promised to allot a sum out of the Nansen Fund for the purpose of extending credit to refugees and also to take steps to induce the German Government to abolish the restrictions now in vogue against foreigners.

Elias Pasha Cohen, formerly a physician to Sultan Abdul-Hamid, has passed away in Paris. The deceased was at one time a Provisional General in the Turkish Army.

EDITORIAL

he does so as a good member of the Jewish commenwealth, and not as a wearer of a Zionist badge. Similarly when a Jew who is an habitual donour to Jewish relief gives a contribution to a Zionist fund he does so not as a "relief man" but as a friend of Zionism. On the lists of donours to the J.D.C. are naturally to be found the names of donours to Zionism, and conversedly among the subscribers to Zionist funds are a large number of charitably-minded Jews who assist other philanthropic enterprises. The heads of the J.D.C. and of the Zionist organization therefore have no right to label their respective groups as "My Jews," and to project their exaggerated differences into the camps of their supoprters.

The bulk of Jewry will not agree with the J.D.C. that the Zionists "sabotage relief work." Nor will they be convinced that the J.D.C. as an agency of relief has as its object the destruction of Zionism. The quarrel of the leaders will not appeal to the general public. Their dialogue of diatribe may enhance their reputation as controversialists, but not as leaders.

Editor,
CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW,

I have just heard of the passing of Rabbi Samuel and although I never knew him, ever since his editorials began to appear in the REVIEW I felt drawn to him. There was something so simple and straightforward in his articles and the choice of subjects. Even a reader equipped with but a meager supply of words could easily understand his meaning. I always feel that it is human to show our appreciation of our fellow-beings during their lifetime. In this case our poor co-religionist had but barely begun his career among us. So my tribute comes too late for him, but who knows? Perhaps he will come to know it after all!

Cordially,
Mrs Maurice Frankel

LOEW'S

Grim tragedy, gaunt realism, breathless suspense and one of the most beautiful love stories ever told on the screen combine to make a screen masterpiece of "The Road to Mandalay," Lon Chaney's latest starring vehicle, coming to Loew's next week.

Chaney plays a weird character; a sea captain degenerated into a sinister, fight-scarred ruler of an Oriental underworld, hiding in a strange dive on the Singapore water front, andsecretly adoring an orphaned daughter who never learns her parentage.

It is a story that lays bare human hearts, and Chaney rises to some magnificent heights of acting as the father torn between almost heavenly love and almost Satanic environment. He wears one of the most gruesome disguises in his history.

Lois Moran appears as the heroine of the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature, her first role since her success in "Stella Dallas," and Owen Moore appears as "The Admiral," dissolute former navy officer whose own sense of shame brings about a regeneration. Kamiyama Sojin is a weirdly menacing figure as "English Charlie Wing," chief of the Oriental gangsters of Sinapore.

BNAI ZION

Sunday, July 4, the 22nd Hertzl Memorial meeting was held at the Zionist Gardens, under the auspices of the Bnai Zion organization. Several hundred people attended. A. Cash was chairman. The speakers were Rabbi Jacob Gordon, Dr. J. Shayne, A. Rhinewine, B. Nathanson and Chenia. Mr. Schatz conducted the services. Over 300 trees were sold.

WONDERFUL WESTERN RESORTS

No more thrilling holiday could be imagined than a vacation spent viewing the inimitable scenery of the wonderful resorts and special tours of the Canadian Rocky Mountains and Pacific Coast.

Jasper National Park, with its 4,400 square miles of Alpine scenery, its golf course, tennis courts, facilities for riding, climbing, hiking, camping, bathing, boating and dancing, and Jasper Park Lodge on Lac Beauvert offering the visitor all the comforts of home, is without an equal.

For scenic thrills there is the Triangle Tour from Jasper Park along the mystic Skeena to Prince Rupert, by boat to Vancouver and back to Jasper by train through the roaring gorges of the Thompson and Fraser Rivers.

Different again is the sail through the sheltered scenic seas on palatial ships on the trip from Vancouver to Alaska. Nowhere else can such exotic scenes be viewed.

Canadian National Railways have special low tourist fares now in effect, which allow a stop-over at Minaki, the wonder resort of Northern Ontario. These special fares are good on the Continental Limited, the famous all-steel radio-equipped luxury train that gives a daily service from Montreal to Jasper and Vancouver via Winnipeg, Jasper National Park, Prince Rupert and Victoria.

Laurentian Fresh Air Camp

Are you all set for your vacation? Have you decided whether it is to be "beach or mountain; seaside or lakeshore"? Then help us decide on a summer vacation for those poor tired women and very young children, who but for your help must drag through a long, weary, dusty summer in the overcrowded sections of our city. A fortnight of fresh air and country quiet will give these over-tired mothers a new lease on life! Last week the Laurentian Fresh Air Camp sent over a dozen families of mothers and babes, chosen by the Family Welfare Department of Federation, to a much needed summer vacation. Help us continue this good work! Whatever your contribution, it will be of real assistance, and put to immediate use. What can you give? Send your contribution at once to Mrs. P. Glickman, 328 Redfern Avenue, West 2132; or to Lena Ashkaloney, CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW, 288 St. James Street, Main 4079, 2285, 8241 or 6344. All donations will be acknowledged in the CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW. A series of entertainments are being arranged in aid of this fund. What can you do to assist? The conveners want your money, your time or the loan of your car for a few hours. Communicate with them at once!

The Laurentian Fresh Air Camp acknowledges the following donations: Bronfman Interests and B.
